

2022 SSWR Roots & Wings Session II

Strategies for Supporting Anti-Racist Pedagogy & Scholarship: Reimagining Institutional Systems & Structures

May 24, 2022 (12:00pm – 1:30pm Eastern)

Institutions of higher education have a critical opportunity to support anti-racist pedagogy and scholarship, understand the ways in which white supremacy and structural racism operate both within and beyond higher education, recognize how higher education has been complicit in reinforcing and perpetuating institutionalized forms of racism, and work towards reforming institutional policies and practices to end systemic racism within our institutions. Social work scholars are uniquely positioned to be at the forefront of these efforts, model, and document concrete tools and policies that can lead to equitable and inclusive environments to support anti-racist research practices and methodologies.

Our session is convening a panel of academics at various stages of their careers and administrative roles to discuss their experiences of addressing systemic racism within their institutions and in their scholarship. Join us for this timely conversation!

Featured Panelists

Dr. Jennifer Bellamy, Ph.D.
Professor & Associate Dean Research
Graduate School of Social Work
University of Denver

Dr. Alan Dettlaff, Ph.D.
Dean & Maconda Brown O'Connor
Endowed Dean's Chair
Graduate College of Social Work
University of Houston

Dr. Jack Santiago Monell, Ph.D.
Faculty Senate Chair & Associate
Professor of Justice Studies
Winston-Salem State University

Moderators

Dr. Anamika Barman Adhikari, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
Graduate School of Social Work
University of Denver

Dr. Braden K. Linn, Ph.D.
Visiting Assistant Professor
School of Social Work
University at Buffalo

Registration is required for this webinar: REGISTER HERE

Any questions on this webinar or registration process can be directed to:

Arati Maleku, Ph.D., Co-Chair, SSWR Research Capacity & Development Committee maleku.1@osu.edu